Quality of life in Lee near bottom in state

Lee County's quality of life is the second lowest in the state, according to a study by the University of Wisconsin's Population Health Institute and the Robert Wood Johnson Foundation.

Neighboring Owsley County has the worst health outcomes in the state, the study says.

Quality of life consists of four factors: poor or fair health, poor physical health days, poor mental health days and low birth weight.

According to the study, 35 percent of Lee County adults have poor or just fair health. The state percentage is 21 percent.

Lee County adults say they have 8.2 poor physical health days compared with 4.8 statewide. Poor mental health days are 7.7 in Lee County and 4.3 for the state.

The county's low birth weight rate is 11.3 percent. The state rate is 9.1 percent.

Under the category of health behaviors, 41 percent of Lee County adults smoke. The state rate is 26 percent.

However, the county is much better than the state when it comes to adult obesity. The county adult obesity rate is 29 percent, while the state rate is 32 percent.

Lee County also is better than the rest of the state under social and economic factors when it comes to the high school graduate rate. The state rate of 86 percent trails the county's 88 percent.

Under the category of clinical care, Lee County has one primary care physician for every 3,853 residents. That is far worse than the state rate of one for every 1,551.

The county also trails the state in dentists. The state rate is one dentist for every 1,683 residents, and the county rate is one for every 2,420.

Conversely the county is being treated by more mental health providers than the rest of the state. Lee County has 454 residents per mental health provider. The state has a rate of 621 to one.

The category of physical environment shows that Lee County's air has a 12.9 particulate matter, which is better than the state's 13.5.

Drinking water violations, the study says, are at a rate of nine percent for the state and 91 percent for Lee County.

County workers with a long commute are at 35 percent. The rate for the state is 28 percent.

This past Monday State Auditor Adam Edelen released a report on the financial strength of rural hospitals.

Marcum & Wallace Hospital in Irvine was ranked in the good category.

The Kentucky River Medical Center in Jackson did not supply financial information, and so was not ranked.

Four to have parole hearings

Three people convicted in Lee County and one in Owsley are scheduled for parole hearings this month, according to the Kentucky Parole Board.

Verda Moore, convicted in September 2014 in two cases for trafficking in a controlled substance in the first degree, is eligible for parole in June. Moore is housed at the Three Forks Regional Jail.

Nekea Rose is housed at the Little Sandy Correctional Complex, and is eligible for parole in June. Rose was convicted in October 2011 of theft by unlawful taking and burglary in the third degree.

Olympia G. Sandy is eligible for parole in June. Sandy was convicted in December 2013 of trafficking in a controlled substance in the first degree and theft of a controlled substance. Sandy is housed at the Casey County Detention Center.

Shane Michael Checinski was convicted in May 2013 in Owsley County of manufacturing methamphetamine. He is housed in the Kentucky State Penitentiary, and is eligible for parole in June.

Extension budget approved; tax rate flat

The Lee County Cooperative Extensive Service Board approved its 2015-2016 budget Tuesday, which does not include any tax increases, and is lower than last year's budget.

Extension Agent Ted Johnson proposed the budget of $476,230. That is around $200,000 less than last year because it includes the cost of the new building that houses the service.

The board had decided to not seek the compensating tax rate that was permitted. If it had taken that path another $40,000 in revenue would have been coming into the agency.

However, the 15.67 cents per $100 of assessed value on personal property remained flat. The income it is to produce is expected to be $57,888.

The rate on real property of 7.6 cents also remained flat. It is expected to generate $180,881 in revenue.

Another $9,977 is hoped for from the motor vehicle/watercraft tax.

The revenue cannot be known because not everyone pays his/her taxes. The service anticipates a loss of $10,000 from delinquent taxes.

Total revenue is expected to be $231,030 from taxes.

Also on the revenue side is $200 from interest; $195,000 in the Capital Improvement Fund; $30,000 in the Equipment Fund; and $20,000 anticipated carryover.

On the expense side, salaries and benefits for two employees and a small portion for two agents amount to $80,062.

Travel is expected to cost $16,250.

Professional improvement adds another $3,500.

Operational expense, which includes such items as utilities, equipment, supplies and insurance come to $222,434.

The service has a reserve fund of $253,795.

Also during Tuesday's regular monthly meeting, the board approved the expenditure of up to $7,500 for proposed improvements inside and outside of its new building. Most of that is for improvements outside of the building such as more gravel, concrete and raised plant beds.

Johnson told the board that a field day for students and an open house are planned for May 1. The public is invited to the event, which will include free tomato plants to the first 200 visitors and free cutting boards to the first 50. A total of 25 booths are planned.

Board Chair Larry Tincher said he was very pleased with the new building, which is located in the county industrial park off KY 11 South.

Contractor Berry Jackson said the energy efficient structure, which is all-electric, produced an electric bill of only $203 last month.

Johnson discussed the raised plant beds. He said the agency received a $7,000 grant for the beds.

"I want to show you what you can do with a raised bed," he said.

Escapees still on the lam

Police are continuing the search this week for two Wolfe County escapees who jumped out of a jailer's van Wednesday, March 25, in Lee County.

"We are continuing our search, and ask that anyone with information contact local law enforcement or the Kentucky State Police," said KSP Trooper Robert Purdy on Monday.

Dallas Trent, 19, and his cousin John Trent, 23, both of Lacy Creek in Wolfe County were returning to the Three Forks Regional Jail from a court appearance in Camp-ton. They were in a Wolfe County jail van on KY 498 when the vehicle slowed because of a truck stopped in the road. The back door of the van was unlocked and the two opened it and ran off the road.

Using dogs, police found where the two had gone off the road and later returned to it.

The Enterprise has learned that three vehicles with family members were stopped on the road. The occupants said they were going to the jail to visit the Trents.

The two are charged with robbery in the first degree from the alleged armed robbery on March 18 of the Campton Apple Market.

Both are described as being approximately 5'7" tall and weighing 140 pounds.

Ever faithful daffodils are heralding the spring.

Happy Easter!

Senator Robert Stivers:
Legislative Update

After reflecting on the 2015 session, it is clear that the General Assembly achieved success in the major issues we strived to address, despite the short thirty-day session.

Life-saving, landmark legislation was achieved by the Kentucky General Assembly during the final hours of the 2015 short session. The Senate led the action on heroin legislation for the third year, passing Senate Bill 5 the first week of this session. What we agreed upon with the House ended up being Senate Bill 192, a comprehensive approach to address the scourge of heroin, after countless hours of bipartisan work. The bill was signed into law Wednesday morning by Gov. Beshear, and is now in effect due to an emergency clause.

The legislation will provide better tools to curb the deadly impact of heroin in our state. Penalties for dealing and trafficking increase to keep these criminals off the streets. New provisions include a new crime punishable by up to 10 years in prison for importing heroin into Kentucky with the intent to distribute or sell it. Addicts will have more resources for treatment and diversion with an infusion of over $10 million to go toward rehabilitation options. Another potential life-saving measure included in SB 192 is the administration of naloxone for first responders. Naloxone is a drug that immediately counters the effects of heroin on one’s body, and when administered upon discovery of an overdose can save lives.

House Bill 8 passed as a way to extend protective orders for victims of dating violence in relationships. Currently, victims of dating violence in Kentucky must file criminal charges against their partner in the hope of preventing ongoing abuse. Only victims who are married to, have a child with, or live with their abuser can seek civil protection from dating violence or abuse, physical violence, or stalking as specified under law.

Combating heroin and dating violence were two major needs that the Senate and House acted on in the final days of the session. However, other beneficial measures also were successful this year:

SOAR Legislation. Established a mechanism to set up grants and incentives for entrepreneurship in the Appalachian Region through SOAR, a non-profit organization.

Medical Research Center. The legislature authorized bonds to build a multiple use medical research center at University of Kentucky to target high rates of cancer, diabetes and heart disease plaguing Kentucky’s citizens.

Telecommunications Deregulation. Ending phone companies’ obligations to provide landlines in urban and suburban areas will allow more investment and infrastructure in modern technologies – expanding rural access to reliable cell and broadband service. The measure also ensures those with land lines can choose to continue their current service.

Child booster seats. House Bill 315 requires booster seats to be used in motor vehicles by children who are less than eight years old and are between 40 inches and 57 inches in height.

Ignition interlock. Senate Bill 133 expands the use of ignition interlocks for people caught driving under the influence of alcohol. It supplements hardship licenses – special licenses allowing people with suspended licenses to drive to work, school and doctor’s appointments – with ignition interlocks. That’s a device about the size of a mobile phone that is wired into the ignition system of a vehicle. A motorist must blow into the device in order to start their vehicle.

Tax check-offs. Senate Bill 82 creates state income tax refund check-offs to support pediatric cancer research and Kentucky’s rape crisis centers. SB 82 originally focused solely on creating a tax check-off to support pediatric cancer research, but was amended to include a check-off for rape crisis centers.

My colleagues and I will go back to our districts now, and, beginning in the summer continue to meet and work on issues during the interim period and through joint committee meetings.

A complete list of new laws is available on the Legislative Research Commission’s website, www.lrc.ky.gov. You are invited to contact me at my office in Frankfort by dialing 1-800-372-7181 or 502-564-8100.

Backlash against bigotry could slap Kentucky

Lexington Herald-Leader

Kentucky lawmakers need to pay close attention to the backlash against Indiana’s new religious freedom law, which has pushed that state’s legislative leaders to search for a way to change it so it does not allow discrimination against gays.

Kentucky is one of 19 other states that passed a similar law. Lawmakers overrode Gov. Steve Beshear’s 2013 veto. Beshear — responding to a broad coalition of business, religious and local government leaders — said the law was so vague that it could cause legal problems.

The Indiana law stands out from most of the other state laws because it gives businesses the right to use the law against private citizens. Kentucky’s law restricts government from burdening a person’s freedom of religion.

Yet, now that such laws are the focus of heated national debate, it is less likely opponents will stop their objections at the Indiana line. Republican Gov. Jan Brewer of Arizona vetoed a similar bill in 2014 after a national backlash from business leaders, gay rights groups and others.

In recent days, Indiana Gov. Mike Pence insisted his state’s law was aimed at protecting religious minorities from government interference. Yet, there is no denying that conservative groups and lawmakers promoted these laws as protection for individuals and businesses afraid they would be forced in some way to support gay rights and marriage.

Indiana is in the spotlight now because it recently lost its court battle to ban gay marriage and the law was signed last week, right when attention was shifting to Indianapolis as host of the NCAA Final Four tournament. The possibility that Pence could join the GOP presidential primary was also a factor.

That limelight could shift to Kentucky soon enough. Chances are strong that the U.S. Supreme Court will rule the state’s gay-marriage ban unconstitutional. And Sen. Rand Paul, who is to announce a presidential run next week, just declared gay marriage “a moral crisis.”

Should Kentucky legislative leaders seek to modify the religious liberty law? They should at least get a review of the law to determine the potential for legal problems. Some legal scholars suggested in recent days that states with religious freedom laws also could pass a fairness law — now just in Lexington, Louisville and five smaller cities in Kentucky — banning discrimination against gays and lesbians.

Granted, it’s hard to be optimistic about lawmakers taking such a courageous stand, especially considering that many who overrode the governor’s veto did so out of fear that not doing so would hurt their re-election chances.

Lawmakers should start thinking of some kind of response. They insisted on a law that has the potential to hurt Kentucky financially when the state is rising on the national stage. Hoping no one notices is not a wise strategy.

Will Smith recognized for service

On Wednesday March 25, U.S. Congressman Hal Rogers presented Will Smith, House Appropriations Committee staff director, of Beattyville, with the “Keeping the Promise Award”. He has kept the promise to the people of South Eastern Kentucky by implementing the intentions of Congressman Rogers to provide adequate funding for programs that serve his district. The award was presented in Congressman Rogers’s office at the Capitol, given by the East Kentucky Community Action Partnership.

The East Kentucky Community Action Partnership, consisting of nine Community Action Agencies in the 5th district, created the award. It is to recognize someone or organization that has kept their promise to help Eastern Kentucky, and its people, improve their lives.

The award has also been given to Bob Mitchell, former District Staff Director, for all the work he has done to Keep the Promise to Eastern Kentucky.

The award itself has been different each year. East Kentucky Community Action Partnership presents a local craft or material item to the recipient from Eastern Kentucky. This year’s award was created by wood worker Tyler Adams of Middlesboro, KY. He created the unique one of a kind, handcrafted, end table with UK engraved on the top.

Jobless rate continues decline

Lee County’s unemployment rate dropped significantly from January to February, according to the Kentucky Office of Employment and Training.

The 8.2 percent February rate followed an 8.7 percent jobless rate in January. The February 2014 rate in the county was 14.3 percent.

All of the counties in the Kentucky River area saw their rates drop from January to February. Lee County now has the lowest rate in the area. The other counties, with their January and then February rates are: Breathitt – 11.1 percent to 10.1 percent; Knott – 10 percent to 9.5 percent; Leslie – 12.1 percent to 10.3 percent; Letcher – 11.1 percent to 10.2 percent; Owsley – 10.2 percent to 8.6 percent; Perry – 9.7 percent to 8.6 percent; and Wolfe – 11.8 percent to 10.2 percent.

Woodford County recorded the lowest jobless rate in the state at 3.5 percent. Magoffin County’s 14.3 percent was the highest.

Unemployment statistics are based on estimates and are compiled to measure trends rather than actually to count people working. They do not include unemployed people who did not look for employment during the period.

Area schools to get more money

Three local school districts are to receive additional state funding, which had been cut last November due to a miscalculating of students.

Lee County schools are to get $16,372, Owsley $14,248 and Wolfe $25,536.

A press release from the office of State Sen. Robert Stivers says, “After a Conference Committee was formed to reach agreements on House Bill 510, the measure passed both the Senate and House chambers, which provides the SEEK funding statewide to make up for funds cut in November due to the miscalculation.”

Lee County Schools Finance Officer Zina Gibson said that to money would go into the district’s general fund. She said she knew there was proposed legislation concerning the miscalculation, but did not know how much Lee was to receive.

SEEK is the major pot of state funding for schools. It is aimed for instruction, not facilities.

Solar Bugs

By Mollie Johnson and Laura Frye

On Thursday, March 26th two freshman students Laura Frye and Mollie Johnson advanced to the state Science Technology Leadership Program (STLP) Competition at Rupp Arena in Lexington, KY.

The young ladies created solar bugs with vibrating motors, solar panels, antennas and legs that move with energy from the sun. The students developed and taught lessons to fourth grade science classes at Beattyville Elementary.

The materials and supplies for the lesson were purchased through a PRIDE grant at Lee County High School.

Thank you to the following people for their support of this project: Leslie Cable, Jana Durbin (STLP Coaches), Sandy Gay, Cindy Neiderman and Shana Minter.

Eye to Eye

with David Blandford, M.D.

CHRONIC EYELID INFECTION

Chronic eyelid infection (“blepharitis”) is often caused by seborrheic dermatitis, which is characterized by excess oil secretion and frequently affects the scalp. This oil buildup, which leads to dandruff on the scalp, causes localized irritation, redness, burning, itching, and dryness near the eyes. This problem can be treated at home, initially with the placement of warm compresses on the eyelids for about two minutes, followed by subsequent reapplications of the compresses to loosen the oil and scales. Next, the eye should be washed with a cotton swab moistened with diluted baby shampoo (one part shampoo to 20 parts water), followed by warm compresses. If this once-daily cleaning regimen does not prove effective within two weeks, the eye doctor should be consulted.

The single best way to avoid eye infections is to follow proper care guidelines as prescribed by your eye care professional. Healthy eyes mean a better life. At KENTUCKY EYE INSTITUTE, we’re currently accepting new patients and welcome you to call 606-666-9393 to schedule an appointment. We’re located at 540 Jett Drive, where we provide total eye care for the entire family. We specialize in “EYE CARE FOR ALL AGES.”

P.S. An untreated bacterial eye infection can lead to “ulcerative blepharitis,” which can cause eyelash loss, eyelid scarring, and corneal inflammation.

Community Easter Egg Hunt

Submitted by Allen Booth

This past Saturday, March 28, Beattyville Assembly of God held their annual Community Easter Egg Hunt at Happy Top. The brisk wind did not deter children from ages one to 11 from finding eggs in abundance. Each egg contained candy or a coupon to receive a prize. There were six prize tables with dozens of prizes from which the children could choose. After the egg hunt, the food line opened where free hot dogs with chili, chips, and a drink were served. Simultaneously the inflatables opened for the children to bounce, slide, and generally have fun. There were relay and other types of games available.

Hats off to Pastors Keith and Stacy Holley for their leadership and the many others who made this fun community event possible!

“Collage”

Other fun aspects of the Community Easter Egg Hunt at Happy Top were food, games, and inflatables.
